Parts of Flood Area Destined for U.S. Aid

By FRANK CORMIER
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson will designate parts of five states in the flood-stricken Ohio River Valley as major disaster areas.

The action, possibly today, follows a pledge the President made Friday at Cincinnati—the final stop on his five-hour, dramatic inspection trip—that “no time will be lost” in speeding aid to victims of the worst Ohio River flood since 1945.

The President will make the designations as soon as governors of the waterlogged states apply for disaster grants and establish eligibility for the federal money. Aid allocations will mount into the millions of dollars.

On the basis of first hand reports given Johnson during his hastily arranged, 740-mile aerial survey, the following states will be able to claim federal funds to help rebuild and repair essential public facilities: Ohio, Indiana, West Virginia, Kentucky, and Missouri.

Illinois and Pennsylvania, which were included on Johnson's low-altitude tour, will be eligible for less sweeping federal assistance such as free grain for livestock and easy-credit loans for property owners victimized by the muddy water.

At the Cincinnati airport Johnson said he would expedite federal aid “on the basis of what I saw.” And he said all Americans joined him “in expressing our sympathy to those who have suffered” in the disaster that affected an estimated 110,000 people and caused damage of $50 million.

The quick trip, to dramatize Johnson's contention that compassion is not incompatible with federal frugality, inevitably was laden with political implications in this election year.

Johnson did nothing to dispel the implications when he made a 15-minute, campaign-style handshaking and autographing foray into the airport waiting room at Cincinnati, where hundreds of well-wishers crowded around him.

Governors of the seven flood-affected states were invited by the White House to join Johnson for the trip. The only one who could not catch up with the Chief Executive was William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania, a Republican who figures prominently in talk about potential GOP candidates. Scranton sent a deputy.

Delight Bonds Recovered by the FBI

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The FBI disclosed here Thursday that $200,100 in United States savings bonds stolen more than a year ago have been recovered in San Francisco.

Roy L. Moore, special agent, said almost all of the bonds were taken in a burglary of a bank at Delight the weekend of Jan. 26-27, 1963.

The 1,105 bonds, owned by 50 persons, ranged from $25 to $1,000 denominations, Moore said. He said the bonds were recovered last Dec. 23 at the depot of a San Francisco transportation firm.

Until a few days ago, the FBI used the bonds in the investigation of the case, Moore said. He said the bonds had been in transit between members of the underworld. Three suspects now are serving prison terms in other states, Moore said, but no charges related to the bonds have been filed against them.

Owners of the bonds already have been issued duplicates of them, and the bonds will be sent to the Treasury Department to be cancelled and destroyed, he said.

He declined to say how the FBI found the bonds.

Arkansas River Basin Achievement

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Progress in Arkansas River Development so far is “a great achievement,” but still only the foundation of what is to come, the president of the Arkansas Basin Development Association said today.

Verser Hicks, Tulsa banker who heads the tri-state river organization, called the past year “the greatest year of accomplishment in the history of this association,” but warned that unless Congress appropriates more funds the navigation project faces a delay of at least one year.

Hicks' report opened the association's annual meeting here. Maj. Gen. Jackson Graham, Army Engineer chief of civil works, was to speak at a luncheon.

James Webb, administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, will talk at a banquet tonight concluding the one-day session.

In his annual report, Hicks said that unless Congress appropriates $15 million more than the $84 million asked in President Johnson's budget for the Arkansas River next year “We cannot now expect to see the navigation project completed before 1971 and I know some very well informed persons who think the date is more likely to be 1972 or 1973.”

If construction costs rise and the present rate of appropriations does not increase, he said, “my judgment is the completion year will be 1974.”

The original timetable called for completion of an Arkansas River navigation channel to Little Rock by 1966, to Fort Smith by 1968 and to the Tulsa area by 1970.

Hicks said $427 million has been appropriated for the $1.2 billion navigation project so far, but that $773 million still must be granted.

Hicks said the Arkansas Basin now has 17 reservoirs, counting three which are an integral part of the navigation system, Oologah, Keystone and Eufaula in Oklahoma. Two more in Kansas should be finished this year and two other dams are under construction in that state.

Three navigation locks are under construction in Arkansas, Hicks said, and work will start this year on two more. Work may start next year on five more locks, to make a total of 12 of the planned 18.

He said, however, that engineers are studying the possibility of eliminating one lock on the Verdigris River, which forms the upper part of the navigation channel from near Muskogee to near Tulsa.

Production of Eggs Has Spilled Over

By J. C. TILLMAN
Associated Press Writer

Arkansas' heavy egg production has spilled its market over into other states, and at least one of them doesn't like it.

Oklahomans have been up in the air for a week over shipments of Arkansas eggs into their state. Prices dropped six cents a dozen last week after truckloads of eggs went to Tulsa and Oklahoma City.

Poultry interests there claimed Arkansas was using Oklahoma as a “dumping ground” for surplus eggs and creating havoc in local markets.

Arkansas poultrymen say simply their industry is growing by leaps and bounds and they are forced to find new markets.

Ed Harms of the Arkansas Poultry Federation said the industry is growing “by leaps and bounds” and that the state has found new markets in Houston, Denver, St. Louis and Washington, D.C.

These shipments have created no reported controversy and indications are that the markets will continue to be served.

But there were conflicting opinions in Oklahoma whether the shipment of Arkansas eggs should be allowed.

About 40 representatives of the state's poultry industry met late Wednesday with Gov. Henry Bellmon and state agriculture officials to discuss the problem.

Bob Culver, president of the Oklahoma Egg Council, charged that a Springfield firm was “hitting below the belt” by shipping in eggs.

And Carl Davis, representing the Oklahoma Poultry Hatchery Association, commented, “We should come up fighting. If they are going to play rough with us, we should play rough with them.”

Great Riches of Italy Is Fabled Past

By JAMES M. LONG

ROME (AP)—After 20 to 30 centuries, Italy's greatest goldmine is still the buried archaeological treasures of its fabled past.

The take each year is fabulous—in priceless finds for museums and hundreds of thousands of dollars in contraband for smugglers.

Found in the past few months have been the long lost Greek colony of Sybaris, whose dancing horses led to the downfall of a luxury-loving populace, and the mystery mummy girl of Grottarossa whose body after 1,800 years still is scented with the perfume of an unknown art of embalming.

Still sought were Spina, last mystery city of the long dead Etruscans, a Rosetta stone clue to translation of the still unreadable Etruscan language, and relics of the Greek war fleet naval defeat in history.

Under Italian law all archaeological objects—the old or the newly discovered—are property of the state.

That was promoted by necessity. A few centuries ago noble Roman families hauled away statues and whole buildings of ancient Rome to decorate their villas.

In far southern Italy aerial photographs finally disclosed the outlines of what Italian archaeologists are convinced is long lost Sybaris. Digging has just started.

Sybaris was the Greek colony whose late to bed and late to rise habits made Sybarite a synonym for voluptuous living.

It was founded by the Greeks in 720 B.C. and was danced to doom 2,500 years ago by its performing horses.

The Sybarites had trained them to dance to music as entertainment at the nightly wine fetes. When Sybaris was attacked by its poorer and weaker neighbor Croton, the Crotonians won by a trick.

When the famed Sybarite cavalry charged their infantry ranks, the Crotonian band played dance music and the charge broke into chaos as the Sybarite horses pranced and pirouetted to the tune.

The latest major find was the mystery mummy of a girl of 7 or 9, dug up amazingly after 18 centuries at Grottarossa, just north of Rome.

The embalming process, with a fluid still fragrant after centuries, is believed to be Oriental or Egyptian. The theory is that the child was the daughter of a Roman consul in the east, that she died there and was embalmed so that her body could be brought home for burial.

American archaeologists, particularly from Princeton University and the University of Pennsylvania, have taken a prominent part in the excavations in Italy.

Man and Wife Shot to Death

EL DORADO, Ark. (AP) — Clifford H. Barnett, 59, and his wife, Anne, 60, were shot to death Thursday night at their home here. Deputy Coroner W. H. McKinney ruled the deaths murder and suicide.

McKinney said apparently Barnett shot his wife and then himself.

She was shot twice in the head. Barnett had been shot in the head once. Both were shot with a .32 caliber automatic pistol.

Police said Barnett and his wife had been in ill health for some time. He picked his wife up at a nursing home Thursday afternoon, apparently to take her for a drive in their car.

Mrs. Sidney Norris, Barnett's sister, found the bodies. She investigated when Barnett failed to keep a dinner engagement at her home.

Quick Verdict Expected in Ruby Case

By RELMAN MORIN

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Jack Ruby's fate, life or death, was placed in the hands of the jury in his murder trial at 1:05 a.m. today, and his attorneys said they expect a speedy verdict.

Ruby sat through five hours of arguments Friday night, unmoving and with a face like a mask.

Ruby killed Lee Harvey Oswald in the Dallas police station Nov. 24. Oswald was accused of assassinating President John F. Kennedy. Ruby's defense is temporary insanity.

When Judge Joe B. Brown told the jury to retire, he said, “I presume you will want to begin deliberations in the morning.”

Most of the jurors nodded in the affirmative. The judge instructed the eight men and four women to elect a foreman, begin deliberations and “then write your verdict on the forms provided for that purpose.”

In Texas, the jury not only determines guilt or innocence; it also fixes the extent of the penalty.

Ruby faces death in the electric chair if the jurors decide on the maximum penalty.

Four prosecution attorneys in the long, grinding night session, asked for the death penalty.

The other possible sentences run from two years to life in the penitentiary. A prison sentence, if five years or less, could be suspended.

During the final five-hour session in a jam-packed courtroom—where all but a few spectators remained to the end—Dist. Atty. Henry M. Wade and his three aides said “American justice is on trial.”

Chief defense counsel Melvin Belli and his two assistants argued that Ruby is “a sick man—a very sick man.” They urged the jurors to “send him where he belongs.” Presumably, they meant a mental institution.

Belli said before the final summations he did not believe the jury would take long to arrive at a verdict. He said he thought the verdict might come in today or Sunday at the latest.

Cottrell Says Croxton Was in Error

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Rep. Hardy Croxton of Benton County was “completely in error” when he charged that Pulaski County Rep. J. H. Cottrell had misquoted him, Cottrell said Thursday.

The charge stemmed from a Feb. 23 panel show on KTHV, Channel 11, in which Croxton, Cottrell and others discussed voter registration.

Cottrell said last Friday that Croxton had “publicly admitted that he had personally observed in his own county a man take approximately 100 voters to several voting places and then vote them.”

Croxton told the Northwest Arkansas Times in Fayetteville that he had been misquoted by Cottrell. He said he actually said that he saw one man cast a ballot for another.

“I'd like to call his attention to his exact words,” Cottrell said.

An Associated Press newsman transcribed Croxton's remarks from the show's tape. He said:

“I am thinking of a man named Squeaky, and every year he has 100 or so poll taxes. Under this (Cottrell's bill), he will be able to operate the same way.”

“He gathers in his clan, most of them can't read or write, takes them up to the polls, stands by them and last year I saw him take his pen and mark their ballots.”

“No one knew who he was. He was just a sort of man in town who dropped in with his herd and he also took them to every poll in town.”

Croxton declined Thursday to discuss the matter further.

He is the leader of a movement pushing for a permanent voter registration bill with extensive safeguards against fraud.

Cottrell is the author of a bill approved by the Legislative Council and Gov. Orval E. Faubus. This will would set up an annual registration system.

Green is the color of everyone's thoughts at this time of year, for next week we have both St. Patrick's Day and the first day of spring. Our subject for today is something very green — fresh grass. That's nothing new, but the way J. F. Barker of Columbus grows it is different.

Since January of this year, Barker has been growing grass in an Eternal Spring Unit, which is just what its name implies. Regardless of the change of seasons or temperature, grass is grown at the rate of 500 pounds a day in a small unit only 10 by 12 feet.

The oat grass is produced hydroponically in an enclosure with electrically controlled temperature that is kept at 68 degrees. The cost of production is $8 a ton.

The advantages of having fresh grass the year round are obvious. Daily feeding of fresh, green grass opens vast new opportunities for more profitable production of livestock. All evidence points to the fact that green grass is the most nearly perfect supplement for livestock.

In answer to questions concerning the hydroponic farm, or unit, the method of growing vegetables and flowers in water instead of earth is not something recent, but a similar system that produces green succulent grass for livestock feed has raised wondering eyebrows and brought forth many smiles.

Hydroponically produced grass should only be 5 per cent to 10 per cent of the total dry matter fed to livestock, and is, therefore, a supplement. But it is, by far, the best such supplement found, and it can be grown from any type of grain such as oats (the type Barker uses), barley, corn, or milo. The grain sprouts the first day after planting in the “hot house,” and in six days it is high enough to feed cattle.

According to reports, grass thus produced is so fresh it's still growing when fed. Well, you can't beat that.

Is this type of farming financially profitable at this early stage of only a few weeks? Well, our friend, J. F. Barker, raises cattle, but he soon found that his unit produced more grass than he had cattle to consume it. He now has 50 head of beef cattle, and one or two milk cows for the use of those living on the farm — himself, his wife, and Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Prescott and son.

One of the milk cows which had gone dry became a good producer after the hydroponically produced grass was fed to her. He is more than pleased with the whole operation.

The Barkers have two sons. One is an engineer in San Francisco and the other works in the aircraft industry in Oklahoma City. They moved to Columbus from Corpus Christi, Texas, but this part of the country is not new to Barker. His mother was Minnie Harris of Ozan, and his ment housing at Pine Bluff father was Henry Barker of the Arsenal, Pine Bluff, Ark.

Cyprus Crisis Eases After Warning

By WILLIAM N. OATIS
UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.

(AP)—The Cyprus crisis eased today after the Security Council had met Turkey's invasion threat with a hands-off warning and Canada had sped a peace-keeping vanguard toward the island.

Meeting in emergency session the 11-nation council moved swiftly Friday night after Turkey had threatened to send in troops and the Greek Cypriot government had retorted that intervention would mean war.

Canada dispatched a plane-load of officers toward the troubled eastern Mediterranean island as an advance party for 1,150 Canadian soldiers expected there within two weeks. The vanguard was due on Cyprus today.

Greek Cypriots, put on a war footing after the Turkish warning, were relaxed somewhat with the rapid U.N. move.

A Greek Cypriot government spokesman seemed to sum up the feeling in several capitals with this remark: “We can sleep peacefully now.”

The Security Council met on less than three hours' notice to hear Secretary-General U Thant plead with Turkey against going through with its threat to intervene to protect badly outnumbered Turkish Cypriots.

Green Cypriot envoy Zenen Rossides, who asked for the meeting, told the council he feared Turkey intended to invade Cyprus that very night. He urged the U.N. to “protect Cyprus from the Turks.”

Orphan Eralp of Turkey denied that the threatening Turkish shot to Greece had set any time limit for compliance. With its demands to stop attacks on and restrictions against Cypriots of Turkish descent.

“It is not an ultimatum,” Eralp declared. “It is a warning.”

The council responded with a unanimous resolution urging all U.N. members “to refrain from any action or threat of action likely to worsen the situation” on the island torn by Greek-Turkish communal strife.

Thant told the council that the proposed 7,000-man U.N. peace-keeping force for Cyprus now could “be established without further delay.” He said Canada, Ireland and Sweden had promised to provide troops to help British forces already on the island.

Rights Group Trying to Gain Voters

(Editor's note: An AP survey last November showed Negro voting power edging upward in the South. With important state and national elections coming up, here is another look at the voter drive.)

By DON MCKEE

ATLANTA (AP)—Civil rights organizations are making slow, steady headway in a voter drive that might push Negro registration in the South to two million before the November election.

An Associated Press survey shows there are about 1.75 million Negro voters in 11 Southern states where white voters number 12.8 million.

White registration continues to increase just about enough to offset Negro gains.

The ratio of white to Negro voters remains at about 88-12 in the states surveyed — Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia.

Where no official records were available, estimates were made by state officials, party leaders and civil rights spokesmen.

Really Not Unusual for Mr. Lodge

By ROBERT P. SALMON
CONCORD, N.H. (AP)—

Springing surprises and accomplishing the unexpected is nothing unusual for Henry Cabot Lodge.

It has dotted his career since he went to work for a Boston newspaper as a reporter in 1922. The job was an unusual one for a college student whose ancestry includes six U.S. senators, a secretary of state, a secretary of the Navy and a governor of Massachusetts.

The unusual continued when he earned his degree from Harvard College in three years.

The unexpected burst onto the national political scene in 1936 when—as a tall, handsome young man of 34—Lodge won a U.S. Senate seat himself. The man he defeated was the late James Michael Curley, then at the height of a flamboyant career as the incumbent Democratic governor of Massachusetts.

Lodge did the unusual again in 1944, about a year after winning reelection to the Senate, by resigning to enter the Army. The 6-foot-3 Boston Brahmin won six battle stars, a bronze star and the Croix de Guerre while serving in Europe with a tank outfit.

He had been an avowed isolationist before World War II, saying, "This is not our war," even though he was a leader in the preparedness movement.

Afterward he was quick to admit that, "I was 100 per cent wrong."

"The Lodge who came back from the war was not the Lodge who had gone overseas," he said and worked to win Senate approval of the Marshall Plan and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Lodge came out publicly in November 1951, in favor of drafting Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower for the Republican presidential nomination. He was practically alone among the political "big names" who did so—until he scored a smashing victory in the 1952 presidential primary in New Hampshire.

Lodge was the leader at the GOP national convention in Chicago that summer, where Eisenhower won the nomination over Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio. Lodge was the prime mover in the campaign which resulted in Eisenhower's November election over Adlai E. Stevenson.

But while Lodge was working for Ike he was away from his political fences in Massachusetts. A young congressman by the name of John F. Kennedy upset him in the Bay State Senate race and Lodge was out of a job.

He was back on the national scene before long, being named United Nations ambassador in 1953 by President Eisenhower. He became known for his diplomatic yet tough-talking rebuttals to the Soviet Union delegate.

The United Nations was the springboard from which he dived into the Republican vice presidential nomination in 1960. Again he—and Richard M. Nixon—was beaten by John F. Kennedy.

It was the late President Kennedy who asked him if he would accept the post of U.S. ambassador to South Viet Nam. Lodge agreed immediately.

The injunction was granted Feb. 26 when Ray Watson, co-owner of the Truckers Inn, filed suit against anti-segregation groups.

Forty-two persons, including Negro comedian Dick Gregory and white civil rights leader William Hansen, were arrested at the cafe three weeks ago.

Gregory and Hansen were arrested after the comedian was refused service. The others were jailed during demonstrations at the cafe.

Dawson said a hearing would be held later to decide whether to make the injunction permanent. He set no date for the hearing.

Watson and Jewel Nugent, a waitress at the cafe, filed suit against Hansen, a white field secretary for the Student Non-Violent

Personalities Bring More Vote Concern

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — New Hampshire voters must have been more concerned about personality than issues when they gave Henry Cabot Lodge victory in their Republican presidential primary this week.

For this to be the deciding factor in one state might not mean much.

But it may turn out to be a dominant point in the attitude of voters in both parties around the country up to and through the November elections unless there is some crisis before then.

Issues in American society have become blurred because so many politicians in both parties see eye-to-eye. They have a time trying to show a difference and they are not very convincing.

In New Hampshire people didn't have much to go on in picking Lodge except their memory of a tall, pleasant, good-looking, rather noncontroversial New Englander who has held highly important jobs under both parties.

As ambassador to South Viet Nam he didn't campaign, said he wasn't a candidate, didn't get closer to New Hampshire than Saigon, and didn't have his name on the ballot. The voters conveniently wrote it in for him.

This was a rejection of the three Republicans who talked most about current problems: Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona, New York's Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller and former Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

Nixon, who says he isn't a candidate but certainly sounds like one, stayed out of New Hampshire. Goldwater and Rockefeller, acknowledged candidates, talked their way around the state for weeks.

Goldwater and Rockefeller didn't attempt thorough discussions of anything. This may have hurt. They approached events in sudden bursts, and pretty hackneyed ones, too, except for some hair-raisers by the Arizona.

For example: on making Social Security voluntary and sending Marines into Cuba to turn on Fidel Castro's water.

While Rockefeller's divorce and remarriage and Goldwater's shooting from the hip may have cost them votes, the results show voters rejected them for the image of far-off Lodge. Image is a good word here.

It can hardly be claimed the voters in New Hampshire or anywhere else remember much, if anything, about Lodge's views on anything except that, like most people in this country, he is against communism.

The last time he was heard from at any length was in the 1960 presidential race when he was Nixon's vice presidential running mate. Lyndon B. Johnson was his opposite number on the Democratic side.

The most that can be said for the Lodge and Johnson speeches in 1960 was that they sounded like warmed-over Nixon and John F. Kennedy. Neither man distinguished himself with views, oratory or panaceas.

This, of course, is in the ancient American political tradition that vice presidential candidates are only echoes.

Before that Lodge had made a name for himself, but non-political, and built up the image of himself on television as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations from 1953 until 1960.

That was after Kennedy beat him for his Senate seat in 1952. So for almost 14 years, with the exception of 1960, Lodge has been out of the main stream of American politics. In that time he held no elective office.

THE WEEPING WIDOW MINE

By Nelson C. Nye

Copyright 1964, Nelson C. Nye

THE STORY: Tiberius Jones demands "earnest money" from Charlie Medders as payment in part of long overdue loans. Charlie has a cave full of silver and pays a small sum after Jones hints that there will be a "shareholders meeting." Charlie does not understand this tactic.

XII

The merchants, looking thunderstruck, regarded the banker with considerable suspicion. Jones colored angrily. "Where's the rest of it? You got more than that!"

Charlie, sighing, flung wide both arms. "Well, look for yourself—don't take my word for it."

Jones glared, speechless; and Burks, shifting his chew, said: "I'll get it out of him!"

"Here—wait," Jones cried, and Burks sat disgustedly. But the banker couldn't afford to make a martyr of Charlie; not, anyway, at this stage of the game. "All you boys that have a claim against Medders, if you'll step round to the bank tomorrow with your figures, can have a pro rata share of what he's turned over."

"That's right," Charlie grinned, "show up an' git yer dimes an' nickels, because you can bet your bottom dollar that is all there'll be when Jones gets done with it."

Jones winced, but he had seen this coming and hung onto his temper. "Meanwhile," he said, speaking up strongly to put the heat back on Medders, "we'll have a stockholders' meeting at one o'clock sharp and issue shares in this strike."

Charlie, carried away by the enormity of this proposal, flashed his teeth like a cornered wolf. "You're not slicin' up any find of mine to put yourself in good with these counter-jumpers! You may own two-thirds of this town but you ain't puttin' me through that kinda hoop!"

"We know what you've got," the banker spoke to the crowd, "and you can't turn your back, now you've struck it rich, on all these fellows who have clothed you and fed you and kept you going When—except for them—you would have starved to death."

Medders found himself boxed. He began to sweat and his skin felt full of prickles. "All right," he snarled, putting the Americans, including the New Hampshireites, don't know where he stands or stood on anything, except that he was a Republican and helped persuade Dwight D. Eisenhower to run for president.

What most probably don't know at all is that as a senator Lodge was an internationalist and, on a number of issues in those days, was more on the liberal than the conservative side.

best face he could on it, "I'm no ingrate! Some of these gents has sure-enough helped me an' I'll take care of 'em—but that don't mean I'll let a whoppy-jawed loan shark carve up my winnin' like I hadn't no rights! Who found it—that's what I wanta know!" Medders shouted, with a look no real man could possibly abide.

But the only looks which mattered to Jones was how this looked—or might be made to look—to these yokels who made up the consensus of public opinion.

With these in mind he said, tired but patient, "All we require is that you satisfy your debts. To those who've helped little some small token should be given, each in just measure, while those who have borne the brunt of your finagling should be recompensed, obviously, in like proportion. Now, wait—" he cautioned, holding up a hand as Medders appeared about to jump from his pants. "You can treat everyone fairly and still have the lion's share left for yourself. You've only to form a company, float some stock—"

"An' find myself with the widders an' orphans!" Jones said sharp and clear: "Or do you want to be hauled into court to face that girl?"

"Girl!" Medders cried, staring about wildly. "What girl?" "Is there more than one?" "The banker said caustically, "I'm surprised you haven't been tarred and feathered."

Though Charlie waved clenched fist and snarling, denied in free-wheeling language even the faintest idea of what Jones was driving at, it was evident to all that this was nothing but bluster. The mean look of his eyes—the blotched cheeks, told the story.

"The choice," Jones said, "is yours; but if I have to I'll put Belita Storm on the stand and let her tell what happened to her out in those hills and down . . ."

With his burros Medders spent the shank of that night in the mountains high above the robbers' roost men called Tucson, scowling at the jumble of flittery lights glowing like jewels from the dusty streets and trash littered alleys. He'd been too upset to go back to his room for what was left of the money he had got from O'Toole.

He was still in a muddle of confused apprehensions as he watched gray dawn begin to creep up out of the east. Who could guess what kind of rotten deal a skunk slick as Jones might have talked that girl into! Or what lies she had told in the grip of ambitions put into her head by the banker's glib whoppers!

Ozark Trail to Be Ready by Summer

By JOHN R. STARR

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP) — Promoters of the Ozark Frontier Trail said today that the trail should be well on its way toward becoming a permanent tourist attraction by this summer.

Governors of the four states through which the trail passes met in Hot Springs today to lay final plans for the promotion.

Gov. Orval E. Faubus of Arkansas was advised that his proposal for a secondary loop to the Arkansas trail will be accepted.

James G. Bennett, travel development coordinator for the American Petroleum Institute, told Faubus that the loop will be included in the second printing of the Ozark Frontier Trail brochure.

The loop will leave the main trail at Salem and pass through Batesville, Heber Springs, the Greers Ferry Lake area, Marshall and Buffalo River State Park before rejoining the main trail at Yellville.

The main trail makes a huge circle in Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and Arkansas.

It is a joint promotion of the four states with the co-operation of the American Petroleum Institute which is handling most of the publicity for the promotion.

Bennett said API will work with the states in preparation of a film to promote the trail and that it will meet with highway departments of the four states to discuss marking the trail.

"We feel this will be one of the most outstanding travel promotions of all time," Bennett said.

Faubus, Gov. John M. Dalton of Missouri, Gov. John Anderson Jr. of Kansas and Gov. Henry Bellmon of Oklahoma attended the meeting.

Carmel Quinn Very Busy Irish Girl

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

AP Television-Radio Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Mid-March is the busiest time of the year for a pretty, red-haired young singer — Carmel Quinn, once of Dublin and now a Leona, N.J., housewife and mother. She has established the relationship to St. Patrick's Day that Lucy Monroe once had to "The Star Spangled Banner."

"We — I — get literally hundreds of invitations to appear on the great day," said Miss Quinn, in a brogue untouched by American inflection. "Some of the biggest clubs of the country want me for the whole week and there are always special affairs in honor of the Saint."

Although all television variety shows to be seen around the Irish holiday automatically are colored green and sing of leprechauns and shamrocks, Miss Quinn will be visible only on one: Ed Sullivan's program Sunday night.

On great day itself, next Tuesday, she will be singing some Irish songs on Arthur Godfrey's morning radio show. This is as it should be: she was launched on her career as a contestant on Godfrey's old "Talent Scouts" television program, and was immediately signed as a member of his professional television and radio "family."

Carmel is the wife of Bill Fuller, from County Kerry, an entertainment promoter specializing in Irish ballrooms. They Carmel carefully rations her time—75 per cent for home and family; 25 for her professional career.

"Missing Links" will move from NBC to ABC at the end of the month, but without its host, Ed McMahon. The easy-mannered big fellow was available—but ABC apparently feels it must use Dick Clark on the show because it has him under contract for the soon-to-die "The Object Is," and will have to pay him whether or not he works.

Recommended weekend viewing:
Saturday — "The Hollywood Palace," ABC, 9:30-10:30 p.m.—Morey Amsterdam and Rosemarie of "The Dick Van Dyke Show" co-hosts.

Sunday — "A Conversation with the President," all networks, 6-7 p.m.—informal interview with Lyndon B. Johnson after 100 days of his administration.

Man Killed by an Avalanche

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP)—Dick Pittman, a ski patrolman who saved a man buried by a snowslide last January, was killed by an avalanche Thursday.

Pittman, 30, was hurled 1,000 feet down Snow King Mountain and buried 10 minutes before his body was recovered.

GUIDED EXPERIENCE MAY INJURE MATURING SON PSYCHOLOGICALLY

By DR. JOYCE BROTHERS

If you have a maturing son of 17, 18 or 19 you may be wondering about what to tell him about sex. Fathers often have quite different ideas than mothers. Take this mother who writes:

"My husband has a preposterous suggestion: That our son be introduced to selected call girls to give him experience. What amazes me is that other men he knows agree with him. Dr. Brothers, we need your guidance as a psychologist. Who is right?"

This proposal isn't original. The idea comes from Europe. Among the upper classes of France, Italy, and Spain, many fathers discount morality on this score, and "educate" their mature sons just this way.

Their approach is interlarded with deep-rooted, old-time European thinking. It goes about this way: The division between pure sex and marriage is a sharp line.

Sons are destined to marry someone of their own class, and premarital experience with these future brides degrades the marriage, so they have this solution: introduce their older son to professionals, thereby educating and relieving them from tension protecting the class and type of girl they're destined to marry.

The practice is common, wide spread, and accepted by this so-called upper-European class. It's only of passing interest that this practice is a lingering heritage from the parent-chosen marriage, where father and mother selected the bride, not the son. This was traditional in many 18th and 19th century matches. Marriages just weren't entered into for love.

Some American fathers have caught this idea, but for very different motivations. This type of father sees his son's sexual activities as a projection of his own. So this unthinking suggestion is 90 per cent wish fulfillment for the father's own concealed ideas. But the American father hasn't the slightest idea of the psychological penalties his suggestion can invite upon his son.

A relationship with a professional at best is fleeting, mechanical, and without genuine romance. It is a simple financial interchange, and usually ice-cold make-believe. What happens psychologically to the son? By such experience, he equates sex with procurement and equates its feeling with mechanical response. What is the sure result? He transfers this artificiality in sex into his own later marriage.

The result is an unhappy bride, who expected genuine romance in her intimate marital experience. Instead, the image of the professional prostitute lurks in the shadows of her bedroom, as her predecessor, and the tutor of her new husband.

Tell your husband what I said and then tell him the psychological penalty he would impose on his son.

For Men Only
Most of us want to get ahead in our jobs, and when we don't get the promotion we'd expected we tend to search for a reason. Often they are rationalizations: "I'm not the kind that flatters the boss," or "I'm not a yes-man," or "It's on account of my religion, or race or background."

Although these excuses may be valid, more often they are not. And if you didn't get that promotion, the probability is that other factors have influenced the decision.

Guidance supervisor Walter Duckett of the Federation Employment Service has discovered what these factors are. I've put them in the form of a test. If you haven't had a promotion in some time it might be of interest to you to answer these questions as truthfully as possible.

1. Are you often absent more than five working days a year?
2. Do you usually arrive at your job in the nick of time?
3. Do you produce about as much work as the average person performing your duties?
4. Even when you are justifiably criticized, do you usually try to defend yourself?
5. Do you seem to get into more accidents than others working with you?
6. Are you often on the "outs" with other employees?
7. If an emergency arose, would you prefer to wait for instructions before acting?
8. Do you believe that most large firms try to chisel their employees?

Now for the answers. Ideally, all these questions should be answered "no." If your answer is "yes" to any one of them you may have found the reason you didn't get ahead. If your answers were mostly "yes" your daydreams are getting in the way of your dreams of getting ahead.

New Rating TV Method Considered

By RALPH DIGHTON

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Discovery of a new way of counting how many sets are turned to what television shows could revolutionize the controversial program-rating industry.

Its inventors say the system, which involves trucks with revolving circular antennas that pick up signals from each home set, will make obsolete rating methods using telephone interviews, diaries kept by pre-selected viewers and recorders attached to sets.

James L. Tanner, who with his brother Charles operates a small electronics company in suburban Wilmington, says negotiations are under way to sell the survey system to a program rating company.

Current rating systems, frequently the deciding factor in whether a show stays on the air, have been criticized because they are based on samplings from a few hundred so-called representative homes.

Tanner says his system can sample thousands and that no viewer will know he is being sampled.

He figures the cost will run $10,000 to $15,000 per truck, depending on the number of trucks purchased.

One of the few outsiders who has seen the device, Frank Champion of ABC Television's transmission engineering department, says "I haven't felt so strongly about anything since the advent of video-tape. There is no question about it working—it is very accurate."

The device works on the principle that each home television set is in a sense a transmitter as well as a receiver. The signal the set picks up from the broadcasting station is converted into a beam of electrons that activate the screen in the tube.

The make-up of its beam differs according to the program. The revolving antenna on the truck is so sensitive that it can pick up scattered signals from the beam of electrons at a distance of 100 feet or more, Tanner says.

By electronically comparing signals given off by the set with signals transmitted from the station the device instantly identifies the channel to which the set is tuned.

Television sets in an apartment house are just as easy for the device, called a comparator, to read as one set in a residence, Tanner says, because it makes its identification in seconds.

Tanner said one truck can count 106 sets a minute cruising at 15 miles an hour. Fifty trucks, he said, can survey 160,000 sets in 30 minutes.

Demonstration Is Called Off

SHEPHERDSTOWN, W.Va.

(AP) — "A demonstration was called off at Shepherd College at the last minute Wednesday night after an agreement was reached between some 75 freshmen girls who occupy a dormitory known as Miller Hall and freshmen dean Molly Borwick.

The demonstration was canceled after Dean Borwick assured the girls that the terms in the dorm will be exterminated.

Moscow Notes Ike's Memoirs

MOSCOW (AP) — The magazine World Economy and International Relations has begun to print some chapters of the memoirs of former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, the Soviet news agency Tass announced Wednesday night.

Almost nothing about President Eisenhower has been printed in the Soviet Union since the blowup of the four-power conference in Paris following the U2 flight into the Soviet Union in 1960.

Desperate Show Wins Ball Game

PINE BLUFF, Ark. (AP) —

John Pettis hit a desperation 75-foot shot to pave the way for Wynne's 69-68 victory over Damascus in the state Negro basketball tournament Thursday night.

Pettis shot came at the buzzer ending the first overtime period and it tied the score. Then Wynne won in the second overtime.

The shot went three-fourths of the distance of the court.

Hootenanny Going Past 240 Hours

SANTA MARIA, Calif. (AP)—Students from Alan Hancock College, Cal Poly State College at San Luis Obispo and the University of California at Santa Barbara vow to keep a hootenanny going for 120 hours to raise $10,000 for Sisters Hospital in Santa Maria.

And, they say, if they raise the money before the 120 hours are up, they'll extend the singing to 240 hours in celebration. A hootenanny incidentally, isn't the offspring of a goat-owl marriage. It's a folk singing party.

Some Sure Signs Spring Is Closer

By JIM BECKER

Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Even though the snow is still flying up here where only noses and the trotters are running, it must be getting on toward spring.

The last robin in the area died of carbon monoxide poisoning when Teddy Roosevelt was police commissioner, but there are ways you can tell.

The pictures on the sports pages are one good guide. The stories are another.

There is the picture of the "big four" of the pitching staff, all holding baseballs out at arm's length toward the camera.

And the one of the lifetime .223 hitter holding up the bat with "300" written on it, indicating he is going to do better this year.

There is the story on the fellow who last year said that he never felt better in his life, but now says that last year he was overweight, worried and mad at the manager, but this year he never felt better in his life.

All the managers but Gil Hodges say they have a chance to beat the Yankees, and Hodges says he has a chance to beat the Athletics, if he can find them.

Actually, the way to find the Athletics is to follow the trail of crying towels left by one C. Owner Finley, who possesses the team, yellow shirts, green pants, porous pitching and all. The trail leads to Kansas City, where it ends abruptly.

So all is familiar, except for the following imaginary quotes, which were written down by a fellow around here who called up to buy two basketball tickets and got plugged into Wally Butts' telephone by mistake.

Charlie Dressen, Detroit: "Our pitching is better. We got some new pitchers from Kansas City." Hank Bauer, Baltimore: "Our infield is better. We got a new first baseman from Kansas City."

Al Lopez Chicago White Sox: "We didn't get anything from Kansas City. We have the same team as last year, when we couldn't catch the Yankees with Mickey Mantle and Roger Maris both out with injuries. But anything can happen in a short, 162-game season."

Yogi Berra, New York Yankees: "We haven't traded with Kansas City since we got Roger Maris. But we're all right. We still play them 18 times a year."

Finley: "I'll trade anybody if it will help me to get out of this town."

Figures Jones Best Fighter He Has Met

By WILL GRIMSLEY

Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It was exactly a year ago today that a cocky Cassius Clay entered the Madison Square Garden ring against Doug Jones with a smug poem on his lips.

"After the Round of Four, 'Jones will be no more.'"

A few hours later, the garrulous Clay was choking on his words. The fight went 10 rounds, not four. Clay was declared the winner on a split decision. Many in the sellout crowd of 18,732, feeling Jones had won, were screaming "fake" and "fix."

"Jones is the toughest and best fighter I have ever met," a subdued Clay conceded in his dressing room.

Harking back to this controversial bout, the 27-year-old Jones called on Clay, the new heavyweight champion, to remember those words.

"I deserve another shot at Clay. I am entitled to the next fight with the champion," Jones insisted today. "I beat him once. I can beat him again."

The picture has changed radically since that wild, boisterous night 12 months ago. The loud-mouthed Clay has become the king of the heavyweights, surprise winner over Sonny Liston Feb. 25 at Miami Beach. Jones has moved up to No. 1 contender in the ratings of the World Boxing Association.

Jones and his manager, Alex Koskowitz, hosted a news luncheon at a swank French restaurant Thursday at which they issued a 280-word challenge.

"It is our feeling that Cassius Clay will not accept this challenge," the statement said. "There hasn't been a real fighting champion since Joe Louis."

The new No. 1 contender is a rugged product of Harlem, a bit on the small side among current heavyweights. He is six feet tall, weighs 186 normally but has got up as high as 196.

He won 36 fights as an amateur, turned pro in 1958 and began a successful career which since then has produced 23 victories, 16 by knockout, against four losses and one draw.

He has little respect for Clay,

YOUR LIFE!

What is your life? "It is a vapor that appears for a little while and then disappears," James 4:14. It doesn't take long to burn a match, or to live a life. From twenty to seventy looks like a long road, but from seventy to twenty is a mighty short road.

A match consumes itself to serve others. Every worthwhile life is like that. One either burns out or rusts out. The worth of life is not how long it is but how well it is lived.
A good life has a vital glow . . . many little deeds made meaningful by a few great decisions. Decide now to attend church regularly. A match doesn't burn very long. Life is short.
Eternity is much longer.

THE CHURCHES OF THIS COMMUNITY ARE THE ONLY INSTITUTIONS WHICH HAVE AS THEIR MAIN FUNCTION, THE TRANSFORMING OF HUMAN LIVES. THEY ARE THE SIGN BOARDS POINTING THE WAY TO GOD.

Sponsors of these messages urge faithful church support. Through these pages the appeal is for all men to stand up and be counted . . . to combat Communism on all fronts . . . to be faithful to God.

OUR PASTORS ARE GOD'S SERVANTS WHO CALL THE SIGNALS AGAINST THE ORGANIZED FORCES OF EVIL. THEY INVITE YOU TO ENLIST ON THE SIDE FOR GOD . . .

The Ninety and Nine Were Safe; -- But One!?
